Chatsworth Road Market is back

Chatsworth Road Market stallholder, Jasmine King, and her personalised keepsakes

THE revived Chatsworth Road Market in Clapton went weekly on 12 June.

Following a campaign by residents and traders and a series of successful test runs, the market is now open every Sunday from 11am to 5pm. Shoppers braved heavy rain to take a peek at the wide variety of stalls, offering fresh food, fruit and vegetables, records, clothes, vintage bric-a-brac and cookware.

Millions in grants

MILLIONS in grants to the voluntary and community sector in Hackney are up for grabs.

Applications are now open for Council funding of up to £50,000 for individual organisations in 2012/13. Smaller grants of up to £7,000, and holiday project grants to a maximum of £10,000 are also available.

Those interested in applying can attend an information event at Hackney Town Hall on 30 June from 10am-12noon.

Council staff will be on hand to give more details about eligibility, and to explain how other voluntary and community sector organisations have benefited from funding.

The grants are offered across six themes: promoting work opportunities; raising educational achievement and aspirations; promoting health, well-being and independent living; helping to make Hackney safer; developing good neighbourhoods; and supporting environmental sustainability.

The Hackney Council Voluntary and Community Sector Grants Programme for 2011/12 gave 69 organisations a share of £2.4million to deliver a range of projects such as holiday play schemes, health and employment advice, employment, and safety schemes.

Examples include woodland nature reserve and cemetery, Abney Park, which received £40,000. Apollo Music Projects also secured £20,000 to expand its orchestral education service. While the Hospital & Prison Action Network received £6,000 for a prostate cancer awareness project.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, said: "Hackney's voluntary and community sector plays an extremely important role in helping to support some of our most vulnerable residents.

"I'm really pleased to be able to announce that the Council will continue to offer grants for this vital work next year."

Anyone wishing to attend the information event should register in advance.

Borough's five birthday honours

Clockwise from above: Triple jumping champion Phillips Idowu, The Learning Trust's Alan Wood, and youth worker Cheri Class

WHAT do Hackney's brightest Olympic hope, the borough's education boss, a former youth centre manager, a special school founder, and a senior civil servant have in common?

All five have been recognised in this year's Queen's Birthday Honours list. Hackney-born World Champion triple jumper, Phillips Idowu, was 'delighted' by news of his MBE for services to athletics. The 32-year-old said: "It means a lot to get this extra boost ahead of the Olympics in 2012. I look forward to putting on my finest for a day at the palace."

Alan Wood, Director of Children's Services at the Council and Chief Executive of The Learning

Trust, was awarded a CBE for services to education and local government. The London Fields resident said: "It's an honour to receive this award as it recognises the tremendous achievement of children and young people in Hackney and the hard work and dedication of their teachers, school staff and The Learning Trust."

Cheri Class got an MBE for her work on behalf of Hackney young people. Originally trained as a teacher, she worked at Clissold Park Youth Centre for 40 years. Cheri said she was 'very proud to receive the award for a job I have always enjoyed'.

Rebecca Rumpler, from Stoke Newington, described it as a 'moving surprise' to see she will become an OBE. She is the founder of Side by Side, a special education school in Clapton, which started as a playgroup in her living room 15 years ago. The centre now caters for 70 children aged between two and 16.

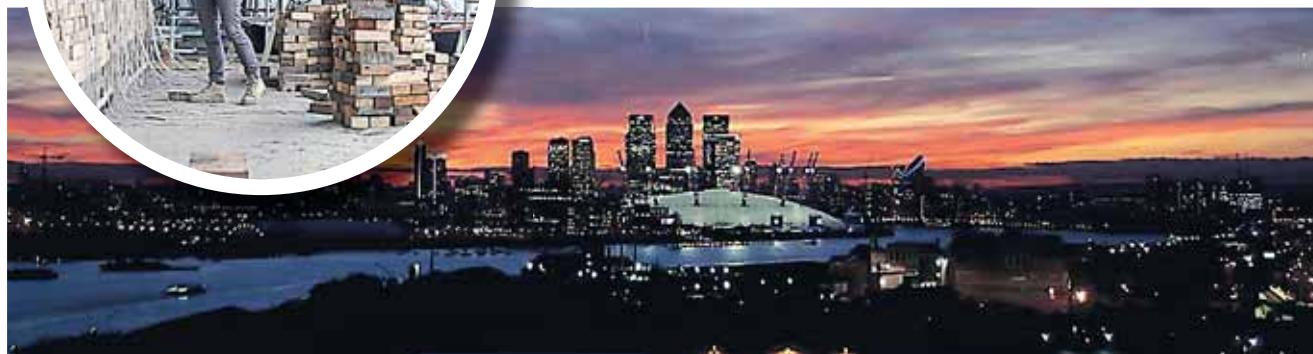

Senior civil servant and Hoxton-based author, Emran Milan, has been made an OBE. The 32-year-old, who wrote a book under pseudonym Kamran Nazeer about his autism, will be recognised for his review on university sustainability.

All five will pick up their awards at Buckingham Palace later this year. Honours lists are published twice a year, in mid-June for the Queen's official birthday and at New Year.

Go east for arts

Clockwise from above: A woodcut print inspired by Folly for a Flyover; Midnight Run events will offer a chance to get to know East London after dark; work under way in the Hackney Wick Undercroft

THE CREATE11 annual summer festival kicks off on 24 June with a month-long programme of over 150 arts events across East London.

Now in its fourth year, CREATE highlights in the borough include 'Folly for a Flyover', created by a group of artists called 'Assemble' who will take over a disused undercroft beneath the A12 in Hackney Wick to put on workshops, performances and film screenings throughout the festival. The project won a £40,000 Bank of America Merrill Lynch CREATE Art Award.

CREATE celebrates the existence of Europe's

“We can showcase the extraordinary concentration of creativity that is found in East London” largest cultural quarter across the 2012 host boroughs of Barking and Dagenham, Greenwich, Newham, Tower Hamlets, Waltham Forest and Hackney – which is the lead host borough for culture. One of the key music events is 'Re: Definition' at Hackney Empire on 7 July, featuring East London rap star Kano as headliner.

Award-winning poet, playwright and performer Inua Ellams will take a small group on the 'Midnight Run' on 2 July – a 12-hour exploration of the city at night. Starting at 6pm the group will take in various East London venues dropping in on other CREATE events along the way.

One of the stops will be a disused bunker in Dalston, where writer Sukhdev Sandhu will read excerpts from his 2006 Art Angel-commissioned journal 'Night Haunts' which captures his observations of the city's nocturnal activity, from cleaners to praying nuns. Sitting in the dark, the audience will experience a spooky evening.

Cabinet Member for Regeneration and the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games, Cllr Guy Nicholson, said: "Through CREATE we can showcase the extraordinary concentration of creativity that is found in East London and bring about the largest participatory arts led festival in the UK."

Benefit cheat sentenced

A HACKNEY resident who fraudulently claimed almost £53,000 in housing benefit and job seeker's allowance after dishonestly failing to declare a change in her circumstances has been given a suspended sentence.

Rasha Taha, 32, of Mabley Street, E9, pleaded guilty at Snaresbrook Crown Court on 10 May to failing to declare that she owned a property, following a prosecution brought by Hackney Council and the Department for Work and Pensions (DWP). She was sentenced on 10 June to 36 weeks custody for not declaring the change to the Council, and six weeks custody for not declaring it to the DWP – suspended for two years. She was ordered to complete 150 hours unpaid work in the community, and has to attend an education, training and employment course for 30 days. She was also ordered to pay costs.

Cllr Samantha Lloyd, Cabinet Member for Finance, said: "The Council will not tolerate benefits cheats, and will not hesitate to pursue them through the courts."

Enjoying a newly completed area of the 2012 Olympic Park

Picnic like it's 2012

MORE than 100 residents and schoolchildren have enjoyed the first public walk and picnic in completed areas of the London 2012 Olympic Park.

Residents from Hackney Wick and Leabank Square, as well as pupils from Mossbourne Academy, Clapton Girls, and Brook and Daubeney primaries, joined a group getting a sneak preview of what will be the largest new urban park in the UK for over a century when it reopens after the Games as the Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park.

Created on former industrial land, the 250 acres are set to provide a colourful, festival atmosphere during the Games. Over 2,000 trees have been planted, and a wetland bowl boasts 15,000 square metres of riverside lawns, timber seating, frog ponds, wetlands, woodlands and footpaths.

Celebrating culture

CELEBRATIONS for Gypsy Roma Traveller History Month officially kicked off at Hackney Central Library on 9 June. Entertainment included Irish dancing from the Maguire O'Shea Academy; fiddle player Tim Cotteral; and singer Josie Doherty (left). Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, presented awards to poster competition winners from Hackney Free & Parochial and Stoke Newington schools. All the entries are on display at the library until 30 June. Activities still to come in Hackney – part of national celebrations – include a reading group and children's treasure hunt at Homerton Library on 20 and 21 June respectively. There will also be a story and craft session at Hackney Central Library on 25 June.

PUPILS from Gainsborough Primary School joined members of the UK handball and goalball teams to try out the finished 2012 Handball Arena on 9 June.

The copper-clad arena – based in the Hackney section of the Olympic Park – was completed in May. It will host the Olympic men's and women's handball preliminary stages, and modern pentathlon fencing competitions, plus goalball during the Paralympics.

Pupils at Gainsborough, which is the closest school to the Olympic Park, will be able to use the arena when it reopens as a public multi-sport venue after the Games.

They joined the teams for a handball and goalball masterclass, and also got the chance to watch the experts play some exhibition games. Gainsborough Head Teacher, Clare Pike, said: "Having the opportunity to learn from the country's top players is inspiring and a real motivator."

"The children are excited about the Games and eager to share their experiences with friends at school and teach them how to play these sports."

"As one of the handball arena's closest neighbours, we are also looking forward to the opportunity to use the venue after 2012."

Jules Pipe, Mayor of Hackney, added: "It is great that Hackney's schoolchildren have had the chance to try out this new arena, which will offer residents access to world-class sporting and community facilities after the Games."

Handball tickets will be available in the second round of Olympic sales in a few weeks' time. Goalball tickets go on sale with all other Paralympic events in September.

Nominate a bearer for Hackney torch

HACKNEY will make its mark on the entire 70-day, 8,000 mile Olympic torch relay – thanks to Shoreditch-based torch designers Edward Barber and Jay Osgerby. Circles representing each of the 8,000 bearers and their stories of personal achievement perforate the golden torch, which was unveiled on 8 June.

Edward and Jay, based in Charlotte Road, EC2, said: "Ever since we were young we have loved the Olympic Games. As designers, this is quite simply the best project going – to design an icon for the Games. We wanted to make the most of pioneering production technologies and to demonstrate the industrial excellence available in the UK." The torch will be lit in Olympia, Greece, and the relay starts at Land's End, Cornwall, on 19 May 2012. It will traverse the UK – and pass through Hackney – before it arrives at the Olympic Stadium on 27 July for the lighting of the cauldron at the opening ceremony.

Around 30 bearers will carry the torch through the borough. Jules Pipe, Mayor of Hackney, said: "We're very pleased the flame will be visiting Hackney and are working closely with the London Organising Committee of the Olympic and Paralympic Games on the route it will take to ensure that as many local people can take part as possible."

There's still time for individuals and groups to nominate people. Bearers need to be over 12, live in the UK – but not necessarily be British citizens – and have a story that will inspire millions of people around the world. Nominations close on 29 June.

HACKNEY'S London Youth Games team is riding high in sixth place overall – their best ever position so far – thanks to fantastic performances from the borough's budding sports stars.

The games, which kicked off on 1 June, involve 25 competition days across 30 sports for young people aged seven to 18.

Hackney squad members won 10 medals in sailing, kayaking and rowing at the Thames Water London Youth Games Regatta on 4 June at Royal Victoria Docks in Newham. The highlight came in the rowing, where Daniel McAtee and Clemency Linden won gold in the coxed mixed doubles. Daniel, 14, said: “This is a good opportunity to get better. It gives everyone a chance to compete in boats we don’t normally race in.”

Clemency, 12, added: “Every time we went to take a stroke, we were having to fight with the waves. It’s amazing to win the gold though, I will remember this forever. It’s amazing to represent Hackney.”

There was more success in the kayak slalom and sprint where Stephanie Wilkinson, 14, won a silver and Fede Pollemo a bronze. In sailing, another Hackney male-female combination worked their way to the podium. Oliver Griffiths, 16, and Josie Gummer, 14, won silver in the RS Feva class.

Out of the water, the girls’ basketball team have reached the finals. They will now meet Haringey, Southwark and Newham at Crystal Palace on 2 July.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, said: “Well done to everyone involved, this really is a great achievement.”

A badge of age without the stereotypes

A VERY active 100-year-old Hackney resident was among the first to receive a 2012 pin badge symbolising ‘age’.

Molly, who only gave up work a few years ago, was at the Hackney Empire launch of the latest in a series of badges celebrating six 2012 ‘strands of diversity’.

Londoners of all ages worked together to come up with the design showing age progression. They shared ideas about characteristics that symbolise different ages and stereotypes to avoid.

Paul Deighton, Chief Executive of the London Organising Committee of the Olympic Games and Paralympic Games (LOCOG), said: “This badge demonstrates our commitment to leaving a legacy of greater inclusion and understanding of diversity long after the Games have finished.”

RESENTERS from Dalston's Lockner estate joined thousands of people across the country to host a 'Big Lunch' for friends and neighbours.

People from the estate and nearby streets got together for the 5 June event, organised by Hackney Street Party Champion, Shane Solanki, and the Lockner Tenants and Residents Association (TRA) Chair, Lisa Linpower, with support from Hackney Homes, which manages the borough's Council housing.

Activities on offer included free running, street art, beat boxing and capoeira, as well as henna painting and ping pong.

There was also live music; a pampering corner for tired mothers and fathers; and a popular 'escort service' where young men and women were on hand to take older residents to and from the party. Younger children didn't miss out – there was a dedicated area for them with storytelling, face-painting and a paddling pool.

Shane said: "Every year the Big Lunch event on Lockner estate has grown in size, with more and more neighbours contributing dishes which they put a lot into preparing."

Residents from Lordship North Estate, N16, also got together for a Big Lunch, organised by its TRA, with support from Hackney Homes.

The Big Lunch was set up by the Eden Project in Cornwall in 2009. The aim is to get as many people as possible across the whole of the UK to sit down to eat with their neighbours.

There's still time for TRAs planning fun day events in July and August to apply for sponsorship from Hackney Homes.

Setting out the stalls to stay

The revived Chatsworth Road Market has gone weekly after a campaign by residents and traders and a series of successful trials

THE heavy rain ensured that it wasn't the busiest of afternoons, but stall holders had something to smile about as Chatsworth Road Market went weekly from 12 June.

Following a series of successful trials, it will now be open every Sunday, from 11am to 4pm. The Lower Clapton market already has 30 stalls selling cooked food, vintage clothing and kitchenware, baby clothes and unique jewellery. Shoppers can also find in-season fruit and vegetables.

Chatsworth Road Traders and Residents Association (CRTRA) have been working with the Council to bring the market back to its former glory.

Association Chair, Diane Cunningham, said: "After years of campaigning by residents and traders, we are delighted that Chatsworth Road will be Hackney's newest weekly market.

"The market will continue to grow over the coming months with more stalls added to ensure local people and visitors make a visit to Chatsworth Road a regular part of their weekend."

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, added: "The Council is committed to improving all of Hackney's markets, and they need our support in order for them to continue to thrive."

A brief history of the market

Chatsworth Road Market, officially named in 1867, grew from informal origins to become well established by 1893. It was after the council estate boom of the early 20th century that the market fully developed however, providing cheap food and household items for tenants. One stallholder at the time was young Jack Cohen, who 'piled it high and sold it cheap'. By his 30th birthday, he had founded the Tesco chain. By the 1930s, there were some 200 stalls trading up to five days a week, and in 1975 there were 169 pitches, of which 44 licences were for the whole week, and 71 for Saturdays only. But the market gradually dwindled in later years and eventually closed in 1990.

'Whatever happens, it is real'

'Senna' director Asif Kapadia, who grew up in Hackney and (below) the late racing driver Ayrton Senna

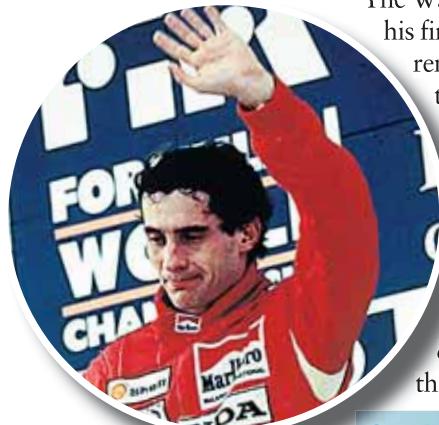

TYPICAL. You wait years for a good sports movie, and then two come along at once.

While cricket documentary 'Fire In Babylon' has captured the imagination of UK audiences, Hackney-born director Asif Kapadia's new film – charting the life of Brazilian Formula 1 driver Ayrton Senna – has won a prestigious Sundance Film Festival award. And its snowballing success and international acclaim has seen screenings expanded to 250 cinemas across the UK.

The director also took a Q&A session when he returned to one of his favourite cinemas, the Rio in Dalston for its local premier on 5 June.

Great sports movies are in the few: 1980 produced boxing classic 'Raging Bull', followed a year later by the brilliant and unintentionally hilarious football-themed 'Escape To Victory'; in 1996 boxing documentary

'When We Were Kings' illuminated the shadowy story behind the Ali-Frazier epic fight 'Rumble In The Jungle'. Asif's 'Senna' follows in that vein and goes beyond his tragic 130mph fatal crash at the San Marino Grand Prix in 1994. Using only archive footage and voiceovers, the film follows the whole of Ayrton's multi-faceted life; as an outsider, passionate, spiritual, competitive and often the thorn to highly political racing authorities.

Asif says: "We follow his story and see why he does what he does; often it's in answer to things that happened to him that have nothing to do with the sport. The more research I did and footage I saw, the more I liked him."

The director is known for beautifully shot films like 'The Warrior', but this is his first documentary. He remembers watching the San Marino race live from his home at the time in Stoke Newington.

He says: "I'm a big sports fan and I knew the story. I think I was chosen to direct this film because maybe some of the other directors wanted it to be an investigative documentary about F1. That wasn't my thing. I wanted to make a cinematic feature."

After some legal wrangling, Asif was given full access to the F1 archive and, separately, won the backing of the Senna family.

"It was a difficult film to make, but they all are. They take a long time, and there are a lot of creative battles that keep going through your head. But at the end of it, I'm proud of the film and the response has been amazing," he adds.

Was it any different being more an editor of archived videos than being behind the camera? "Directing is directing. I don't operate a camera any more. Other people do the work and your job is to oversee and know when to say no. Low budget films are where you do everything. But a feature is a feature," he says.

Born in the old Hackney Hospital in 1972, Asif went to school at Tyssen primary and Homerton House, and his family still live in Clapton. Getting a still camera from his brother as a teenager piqued his already growing interest in visual arts, but he was not initially interested in film.

He says: "Photography got me into graphic design, then I started helping out on short films – which led to working on more short films – until I realised I really enjoyed it. So I spent summer holidays working on movies for other people. I made my own shorts, and the shorts I directed started to become more successful."

His first distributed short film, 'The Sheep Thief' got a runner-up prize at Cannes Film Festival, then feature 'The Warrior' won a BAFTA. Now living in Finsbury Park, Asif's ties with the borough are still strong. He praises the Rio as 'a fantastic cinema in traditional art house style', adding that his close relationship with Manager Charles Rubenstein has seen many of his films show there.

The key to the success of 'Senna' could be that it transcends sport to reach genuine drama.

Asif explains: "For example, the scene with those drivers meeting (Senna and arch rival Alain Prost), it felt like having Ken Loach dialogue in the middle of an action film, where people are having an argument in a room about something complex and you just follow them. It is just real and that was the bottom line – that whatever happens, it is real."

THE GREEN GENIE

All your recycling questions answered

Q: I have a compost bin in my garden for my fruit and vegetable peelings, but I can't use it for other food such as left overs from dinner. Is there any way I can recycle this waste?

A: Cooked food waste can be recycled through the Council's Blue Bin recycling scheme. This service is available to all residents living in street level properties, and on some estates in Hackney too.

All food waste can be recycled, including cooked meat and fish, bread, pasta, tea bags, egg shells and vegetables.

Residents look through the goodies on offer at the Give or Take day at St Monica's primary school

THE latest Give or Take day saw more than 100 people donating bric-a-brac or eagerly snapping up unwanted items.

The event on 11 June, at St Monica's primary school, N1, was the second Give or Take day this year.

Three more are planned for September, October and November. Organised by the Council's recycling team, it saw around a tonne of potential landfill being given a new lease of life. Residents can give or take a wide range of items, including books and toys, bikes, tools, paint, clothes, furniture, kitchenware and small electrical items. Other residents also went home with a sofa bed and a TV.

Wee Lee said: "I came today to donate some things after a clear out. I'm going home with some movies and cooking tools I needed, which is really useful as I am unemployed at the moment. Can we have more Give or Take days please? I really appreciate them."

Another popular freebie was paint, donated by Community RePaint East London. Run by not-for-profit organisation, Forest Recycling Project, the scheme collects and redistributes paint from recycling centres.

Fund your green dreams

THE Council is running a free workshop about the grants and funding available for biodiversity and green space projects.

There are a huge range of funding bodies out there, and this is an opportunity to find out how to get started and apply for some cash to get an eco-friendly idea off the ground. The workshop is aimed at park user groups, wildlife groups, and other Hackney based community organisations.

Projects that could win funding include those to create wildlife areas in parks; food growing; and encouraging new groups to access green spaces. The evening will include advice about the types of funding available; a presentation from community and voluntary sector support organisation HCVS on top tips for funding applications; and local case studies from groups that have successfully bid for cash.

The workshop will be held on 18 July, from 6.30-8.30pm, at Hackney Town Hall, Mare Street.

Make Hackney nature count

RESIDENTS are being asked to count animals, insects, birds and plants to help inform decisions about how parks are managed and planning applications determined.

The Council works with environmental records centre Greenspace Information for Greater London (GiGL) to collect data, and records will also feed into London-wide and national databases, helping to monitor how wildlife is doing across the UK.

Hackney has worked with GiGL to produce a biodiversity audit and so far over 30,000 species

Clockwise from main picture: Mabley Green meadow; the rare black redstart; & the red belted clearwing have been recorded. This includes a number of rare or protected species, including nine types of bat, the black poplar tree and the rare black redstart – a robin sized bird.

The Council would like to know what wildlife people spot in gardens, parks, canals and other spaces, and is particularly keen to increase records of reptiles and amphibians, such as snakes, frogs and toads.

The new bins look like this

Recycle on-the-go in parks

THE Council is installing 80 new on-the-go recycling bins across the borough.

The bins have two compartments, one for recycling and one for litter, allowing passers-by to recycle their newspapers, plastic bottles, drinks cans, glass bottles and cartons.

The first bins were rolled out as part of a trial in Hackney Central, Stoke Newington and Shoreditch last Spring. It was a big success, with over 40 tonnes of material recycled in them last year.

The bins proved a big hit with the public, with almost all of residents asked, saying they wanted to see more of them around Hackney.

For the first time, the bins are also being installed in parks. They can already be found in the newly refurbished Hoxton Square, and will soon be available in other parks. New bins are also being placed in Stoke Newington High Street, Lower Clapton Road, Hackney Road and the south end of Kingsland Road.

The Lost Collection

Until 30 June, KK Gallery, 42 Hoxton Square, N1 6PB

CURATORS of an East London gallery have given new life to some 60 pieces found among unloved and abandoned personal affects in Transport for London's unclaimed property headquarters in Baker Street. Featuring whole portfolios, drawings, paintings and photographs, the collection was uncovered when KK Gallery staff ventured to the office on an unrelated assignment. "We took a look in lost property out of sheer curiosity and found this treasure trove of unclaimed artworks," says curator Danielle Pender. "We thought it would be great to explore the idea of exhibiting lost art with no names or preconceived ideas associated with it," he adds.

However, not all the pieces displayed have retained their anonymity and KK has reunited three artists with their much-mourned work since the exhibition opened. KK gallery staff are hoping to uncover artistic as well as personal value in the collection which will travel to New York and European capitals after London.

"These works may never have seen the light of day and we are giving them an opportunity to be viewed as works of art, as the artist really intended," says Danielle. "The big question is not just who these artists are, but whether they have talent."

YOUNG musicians in Hackney are getting first-rate tuition and support, according to a Government report.

A review conducted by the Federation of Music Services, in partnership with the Department of Education, said The Learning Trust's Music Service was 'outstanding' and praised its work to give pupils opportunities to learn and perform music. The service was also commended for offering Hackney pupils the chance to play alongside professionals.

James Thomas, Acting Head of the Music Service, pointed to flagship event the Hackney Schools Music Festival as an example of how students get a great showcase for their talents in the borough. This year's fortnight-long festival will take place from 1 to 14 July at The Round Chapel, Clapton, and features singing and instrumental concerts.

James added: "We try to provide as many opportunities as possible for pupils to learn music, whether that's singing with their classmates at our summer music festival or learning a new instrument."

"If children are exposed to music at school from an early age, they will develop a love of playing

'normal' activity for all young people in Hackney schools."

Residents are invited to several Hackney Schools Music Festival free events: Borough Beats on 7 July; dance shows on 1 & 4 July; and infant singing from 11-13 July. Other events are reserved for parents.

Pitching big ideas

THEY razzled the audience with their 'augmented reality' (AR) ideas then dazzled them with designs for 'quick response' (QR) codes.

Eleven Skinners' Academy pupils revealed their adeptness with smart phones and tablet-based marketing when they presented ad campaign ideas to 20th Century Fox and Metro newspaper.

The sixth-formers were taking part in charity The Ideas Foundation interagency challenge: a project where they worked with leading creative agencies. Fox and Metro gave the students two weeks to develop an advertising strategy to promote upcoming sci-fi film 'In Time' starring Justin Timberlake.

Ewelina Sniegon, 17, said: "This project proved that I can achieve more than I thought I could and I feel like some doors have opened."

Sophie Robinson, from Metro, added: "Many of the ideas were good enough to run and we will be discussing this possibility with Fox."

The foundation aims to identify and nurture innovative young people and prepare them for work in the creative industries.

News in brief

Pupils asked to help educate

A CHARITY is calling on schoolchildren to remind dog owners to pick up their pooches' poop.

Dogs Trust hopes pupils will back the 'Paws Up For Poop Scoop' campaign this summer by creating leaflets in schools and working with people they know to raise awareness of the need to clean up after dogs. The trust suggests using social media to spread the message or contacting local Dog's Trust education officers for additional support.

Clarissa Baldwin, Dogs Trust Chief Executive, said: "If every dog owner fulfils their duty we can all look forward to summer strolls and picnics in parks free from the worry of dog poop. If everybody remembers the importance of picking up after their dog, we will be amazed at the difference we can make."

The competition saw more than 100 young people from London and Manchester enter, with 23 reaching the final. Shaunette will now take part in a week-long summer school at the University of East London to prepare, then have five days to create the designs for a London Fashion Week catwalk show in September.

The competition, now in its seventh year, aims to bring the fashion industry and creative 16 to 18-year-olds together to develop skills, encourage self-esteem and raise aspirations for the future.

Wimpy kid

POPULAR children's author Jeff Kinney read extracts from his latest book during a visit to a Hackney school.

The creator of 'Diary Of A Wimpy Kid' picked Grasmere primary as the first UK school he visited as part of a tour to promote his books and a second film based on the series. The US author took questions about writing and presented Year Five and Six pupils with signed copies of his books.

Headteacher Mark Derrington said the visit was 'quite a coup for the school' and left children eager to read more of his work.

Are you an Inivator?

Yolanda before the launch of How Can I (or You) Resist on 15 June

Yolanda Hanson, 25, is part of Shoreditch-based contemporary arts organisation Iniva's group of 'Inivators'. The project provides young creatives with a chance to work with established artists, academics and curators

THE first exhibition we've organised ourselves, 'How Can I (or You) Resist', has just been shown at Rivington Place, EC2.

We chose work from emerging artists who could respond in interesting ways to the theme of 'resistance'.

Images inform our perceptions of the global struggle towards justice, human rights and equality. The Inivators were interested in exploring these images and our relationship to them; thinking about how they transmit information.

We showed videos, sculpture, and drawings by emerging artists Lloyd Corporation (Sebastian Lloyd Rees and Ali Eisa), Paul Crook, Lily Keal and Ella Golt.

The Education Space at Rivington Place where the exhibition was held is a place to learn and experiment. Iniva's reading group and artists' talks have also helped to widen our experience of art. For example, a lecture on 'resistance' was a huge inspiration during the development of this project.

Get your career on track

By Michelle Stannard, 24

RECENTLY a big topic for YH World has been the options available to young people who want to get qualifications and experience to prepare them for work.

In May, YH World journalist, Lee Andrews, wrote about the various merits of apprenticeships and degrees. Following on from this, YH World's Haylie, 17, and Jenkins, 18, set out to find some examples of how to take the apprenticeship route for a range of careers.

They visited training provider Information Horizons, which runs 'pay-as-you-learn' IT apprenticeships designed to teach the office skills employers need. Pay-as-you-learn means you get financial support to attend courses if you turn up on time – one of the great features of apprenticeships.

They also discovered DV8 Training, a provider of foundation learning training in the creative industries. It offers a range of free courses and apprenticeships for young people. Another great scheme is Diversity In Visual Arts (DIVA). It offers training for young people in film and television.

A FLASH mob is a planned event where a crowd do a dance or a random thing all at the same time.

On 3 June, Britain's Got Talent finalists 'Twist and Pulse' held two flash mobs around London, to raise funds for youth charity Fairbridge. They work with young people aged 13 to 25, who have found it difficult to engage with other organisations.

YH World's very own dance duo 'Double Trouble' hit the flash mob to conduct interviews and dance it out with 'Twist and Pulse'. They produced a video of their adventures and even challenged the professionals to a dance-off. Watch at: www.yhworld.co.uk/twist_and_pulse; for Fairbridge visit: www.fairbridge.org.uk

Hackney resident George Fitt is enjoying his retirement after his lung cancer was spotted early and treated LOCAL NHS services have launched a campaign to alert residents to the warning signs of breast and lung cancer.

The 'small c' campaign hopes to help people recognise cancer indicators early, when treatment has the best chance of success. It also aims to demystify some common misconceptions about the illness.

Only eight per cent of local people recognised lung cancer symptoms like a prolonged cough, compared to 18 per cent nationally, according to NHS research. The study also indicated that residents are more likely to be diagnosed with the disease after it has reached an advanced stage and is more difficult to treat.

Resident George Fitt, 70, was diagnosed with lung cancer in 2008 after his partner persuaded him to go to his GP because of a cough. He said: "I thought I just had a chest infection."

George had surgery at Barts hospital in 2009, followed by a course of chemotherapy. He said: "The doctors said it was lucky the cancer was spotted early. It hadn't spread. I'm enjoying my retirement now, but if I hadn't booked that GP appointment, I

“If I hadn’t booked that GP appointment, I would not have had such a positive outcome” would not have had such a positive outcome."

Dr Emma West, a Hackney GP, added: "Tragically too many people in Hackney don't know the warning signs of cancer and the importance of checking symptoms with their GP straight away. Our message to local people is that we want to see you if you have any of the warning signs of lung and breast cancer. It's likely to be something less serious, but even if it is cancer, many patients survive these days, providing it's detected at an early stage when it is more likely to be treated successfully."

Helping out at Homerton

A VOLUNTEER programme, Homerton Helpers, has celebrated recruiting 50 volunteers.

Coinciding with National Volunteers' Week from 1 to 7 June, Homerton hospital staff highlighted the volunteers' spirit and their contributions towards making people's experience of hospital as comforting as possible.

The volunteers work in all areas of the hospital, from welcoming and directing visitors, to helping at mealtimes on the wards.

The next milestone is to get 100 volunteers on board, said Jenny Reindorp, Project Leader.

She added: "The new generation of volunteers is like a breath of fresh air, adding their enthusiasm and commitment to hospital life. We know from patient feedback what a difference they're making to people's time with us."

The hospital received more than 700 enquiries and 150 applications for volunteering positions.

Another round of recruitment is set to open in autumn.

X-ray pioneers

A HEALTHCARE start-up firm in Hoxton has been snapped up by a US firm in a rumoured multimillion-pound deal. Dexela Ltd was purchased by health sector technology giant PerkinElmer for an undisclosed sum, but the estimate is as much as £25million.

Founded in 2005, Dexela specialises in low dose X-ray imaging for the early detection of breast cancer and other diseases. Brian Giambattista, PerkinElmer president, called Dexela 'a pioneer' in the development of X-ray detection solutions that had 'achieved award-winning recognition'.

Tracing the archives' roots

After the Council's Archives Service was formed in 1965, its collections were gradually created by amalgamating those of the three former Metropolitan boroughs of Hackney, Shoreditch, and Stoke Newington.

The local history collection from Hackney had grown up around what was known as the Tyssen Library, which had its origins in the collections of the Tyssen family who had been lords of the three manors of Hackney, Kingshold, and Lordshold.

The most important contributor to the collection was John Robert Daniel-Tyssen (1805-1882), the third son of William George Daniel who changed his surname to Daniel-Tyssen in March 1814 when his wife Amelia Tyssen inherited her family's Hackney estates.

John was at school in Shacklewell at the time, and long afterwards remembered that the whole school was given a day's holiday in celebration of his change of name.

He later went on to study law and become a solicitor, so it was natural that in 1828 he was appointed steward of the Tyssen family's Hackney manors, with his elder brother William eventually inheriting the title of Lord of the Manor. John lived in Hackney where he served on numerous local committees and charities, and enjoyed nothing more than investigating the local history and antiquities of the parish.

This interest in local history led him to build up an extensive collection of books, manuscripts, and documents which were kept in the Manor Rooms in his home in Mare Street.

This became the base for the Hackney Literary and Scientific Institution, where the collections were available for consultation by anyone who wished to see them, on payment of an annual fee. Items could even be borrowed if an application to do so was approved.

In 1858, John retired from his stewardship and moved to Brighton, though he continued to study history as an active member of the Sussex Archaeology Society.

and was also elected as a fellow of the Society of Antiquaries. He was interested in his own family's history, tracing them back to their origins in Holland.

John Daniel-Tyssen twice visited his family's ancestral home in order to carry out research, but on his third trip in 1881, his health failed and he died six months after his return to Brighton.

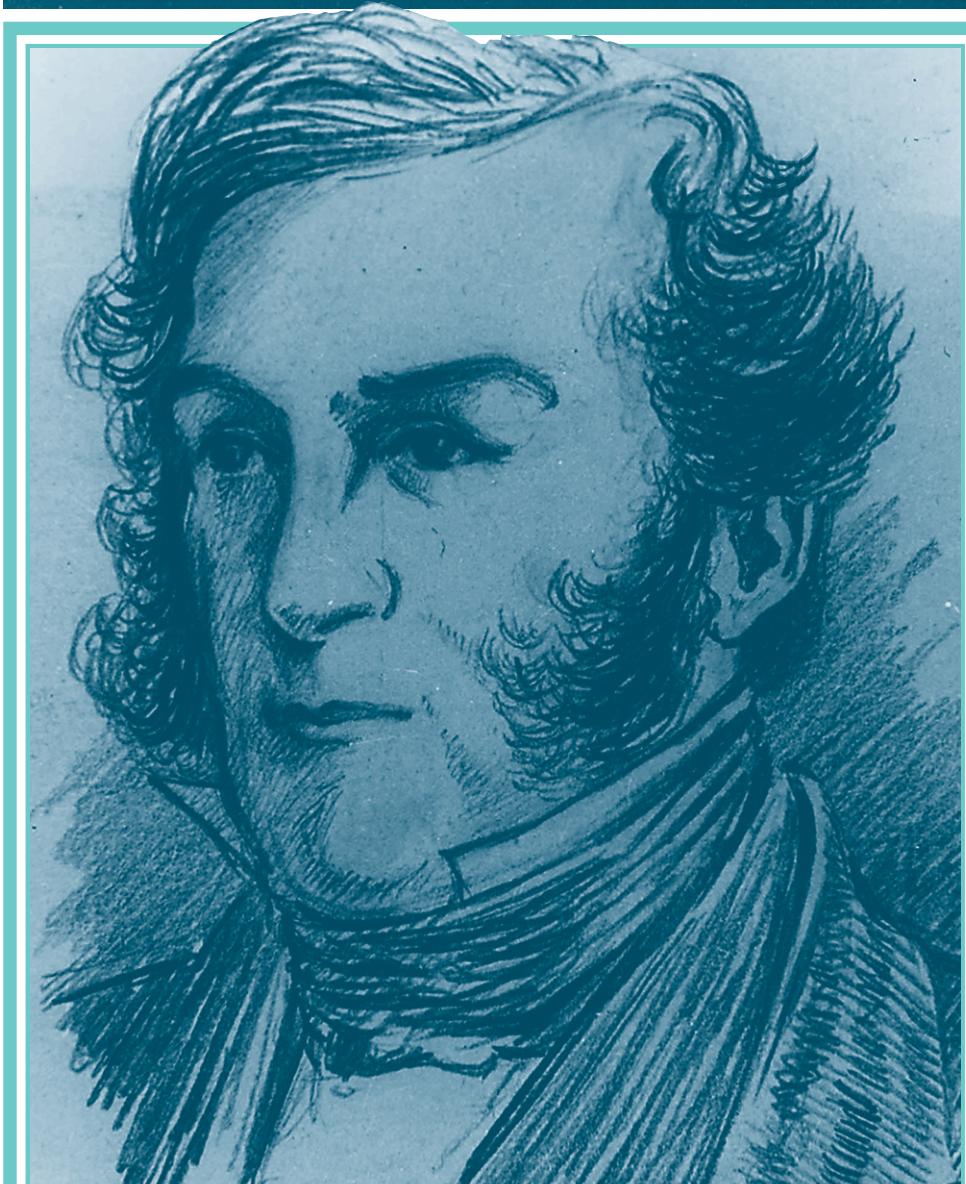

Some of the Tyssen collection had already been sold or donated elsewhere, but after John's death his sons gave the remainder to the vestry of the parish of Hackney (the form of local government at that time). It was made available to all in the Town Hall with its own Tyssen Librarian.

The collection was moved in 1908 to a new Central Library in Mare Street. It remained there as part of Hackney Archives from 1965 until the service moved to the Rose Lipman Library in De Beauvoir Road in 1975.

The Mayor and Councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections were in May 2010.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services. They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern.

Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see. Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – illustrated in the map opposite.

To check which councillor covers your area, or confirm surgery times, call: 020 8356 3373.

Recipes straight from the ovens at Waterhouse www.waterhouserestaurant.co.uk

THIS is the latest in a series of regular recipes courtesy of Waterhouse – an eco-friendly restaurant alongside the Regent's Canal in Shoreditch. Chef Lloyd Hayes serves up a quick pizza with a difference. In Naples these mini pizzas are available from the frigitorie – fried food stalls – around town. You could make these as a quick after-work dinner; a batch for a party; or in advance to eat cold in a packed lunch or at a picnic.

Pizza fritta

Dog survey

THE Council is inviting views from residents, visitors and interested groups on the proposed introduction of several Dog Control Orders. The Council knows the vast majority of dog owners in the borough are responsible. However, feedback from residents and park users has revealed they are concerned by the minority who allow their dogs to act aggressively, or exercise them without considering others. Dog Control Orders give local authorities the power to tackle a variety of issues. The Council is considering adopting a number of these. The consultation runs until 14 August. For more details on the proposals and to take part, visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/dogcontrol; to request a paper copy of the consultation documents call: 020 8356 4504; or e-mail: consultation@hackney.gov.uk

Food for thought

A DESIGNATED barbecue area is being trialled in London Fields this summer. It is by the park entrance nearest to Broadway Market. Signs have been put up around the park to give information on the location of the barbecue area, and the rules about barbecue use in London Fields. The Council wants to know what residents and park users think about the trial. The survey runs until 31 August. For more details and to have your say visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/lf-bbq-area For consultation info call: 020 8356 4899; or e-mail: consultation@hackney.gov.uk
